

STONE Makes Wise Changes

'As we step into our second decade of operation, TONE has a new look website' reports Andy Needham, Managing Director and founder of TONE. The leading provider of scaffolding services, with an unrivalled commitment to providing a professional and quality service, signed up specialist web and print designers WWWISDOM to redesign the site.

The new look, informative and user friendly website goes live in July 2006.

Buying into a bright future . . .

Summer 2006 sees TONE adding to its portfolio of companies with the take over of Croydon based Media Structures Limited and associated company AME National Rigging Ltd. This specialist company has for over 15 years been providing a wide range of temporary structures to the Media and Events industries, areas in which TONE Scaffolding operates extensively. Providing a synergy of service offering to customers means a one stop shop from design to production for their events, with all the benefits of a large organisation as a supplier but retaining that friendly personal service approach.

Dramatic, bright and colourful lighting displays and projections are a speciality by combining the latest technology to enhance historic buildings, as seen at The Queen's birthday parade and jubilee celebrations televised and broadcast across the nation.

From sporting events, carnivals, product launches and the motor & boat shows to Royal occasions, they provide one-off promotional structures, design & build of temporary towers for outside broadcast services, camera jibs and sectional studios with sound proofing for outdoor gigs.

Safety Award

STONE received the highest score, in the high 90s, of all the constructors on-site at Heathrow's Terminal 5 (T5) in May.

'Judged against all the companies at T5, STONE came out ahead of all the contractors to be awarded the Best Safety Record.' said Andy Needham MD, 'There's always an inherent element of risk in what we do, and I am very proud that we came out best on a flagship UK job against organisations even bigger than us.'

Reinforcing the STONE work ethic for Safety First, Andy went on to say 'It's all credit to our good team of guys at the face, the safety message cascading down the line and putting into practice methods that mean they all go home safely at the end of the day.'

Employment opportunities

As the business grows, STONE is always on the look-out for drivers with class 1 or 2, scaffolders, team players, experienced or over 18 years of age wanting to be part of a progressive company that invests in training and has high levels of staff retention. Those keen to work on rewarding, quality projects where there is a strong team ethic and people and safety matter most should call Sarah Welsby, Head of Human Resources or visit our website.
